

THE MANY BENEFITS OF VOLUNTEERING FOR STUDENTS

Volunteering is a great way for students to both give back to their community and gain valuable life experience. Many schools require a certain amount of volunteer hours to graduate, but here are ways to show your children how volunteering can help them become well-rounded adults.

Reduces stress and anxiety

Develops communication skills with people of different backgrounds

Shows pride in the community

Develops new interests that could alter your career goals

Teaches responsibility to follow through with commitments

Showcases the appreciation for hard work

Helps make new friends of all ages and cultures

Shows how they can make a difference in the community

Develops references and activities for college applications

Gives a sense of ownership, accomplishment, and pride

Helps understand the value of working together

Exposes students to different industries that shows the realities of the job

Teaches empathy and kindness

Creates compassion for others
